

Ground Is Broken for New SSK Home

KRESGE'S NEW INTERNATIONAL HEADQUARTERS in Troy, Mich., a half-million dollar structure comprising approximately 560,000 square feet, will have an exterior of weathering steel, architectural clay blocks and bronze glass.

Headquarters To Be Completed in Late 1971

Ground breaking ceremonies for the S. S. Kresge Company's new international headquarters in Troy, Mich., took place December 9, 1969. Troy Mayor Jule R. Famularo and Chairman and President Harry B. Cunningham officiated.

Attending the ceremonies were Stanley S. Kresge, director; Executive Vice Presidents Claude M. Booker, Fred R. Nieman and Robert E. Dawer; Harvey A. Kresge, director of public relations; Ann C. Wolff, publicity director; and Russell E. Duncan, retired executive, now consultant.

Also present were representatives from Smith, Hinchman & Grylls Associates, Inc., architects and engineers for the new facility; developers, and members of the press.

Construction of the multi-million dollar building located at Big Beaver and Coolidge Roads, near I-75, is scheduled for completion by late 1971.

The site of the building will be approximately 560,000 square feet. It will house all corporate activities including the credit office and a data processing center which are now separate from the Detroit Office.

Headquarters will be built diagonally across the corner of Kresge's 30-acre site at the intersection of Big Beaver and Coolidge. Access from both major roads will be provided by driveways situated about 1,000 feet from the intersection.

The building will be an assembly of self-contained units organized around a spine corridor system. All units will be three stories high except for one four story tower. Each unit will have an attached service core containing elevators, stairways, rest rooms, heating and air conditioning equipment, and lounges with vending machines. There will be main lounges and a cafeteria for the use of all employees. Basic utilities only, such as power and water, will be fed to each core.

Major traffic flow within the building will be through three spine corridors which will radiate from the skylighted main entrance lobby and bisect courtyards between the units.

The facility will be built to accommodate Kresge's rapid expansion. In discussing this concept, Sigmund F. Blum, vice president and director of design for Smith, Hinchman & Grylls, said: "Because of the constantly changing and expanding requirements of the Kresge Company within its headquarters complex, a primary goal was to develop the most flexible structure possible which would allow both realignment of operations within the building and the construction of additional space as the need arises. We conceived the unitized molecular system which
